

MESSAGE BY THE PRESIDENT TO THE CONGRESS.

I am reporting to you today on a matter with respect to which the Congress has already shown a deep humanitarian concern.

I refer to the action which our Government in cooperation with the governments of other freedom loving countries is taking to combat the plan of the Hitlerite forces to exterminate the persecuted minorities of Europe. The lives of several million innocent human beings are at stake.

As the hour of the final defeat of the Hitlerite forces nears, the fury of their insane desire to wipe out minority groups in Europe is increasing. The Nazis know that they have lost the war. They therefore seek to insure that the world after the war will be their kind of world rather than the kind of world for which the youth of the United Nations are fighting and dying.

The American people have already made clear the horror with which they view the murder by the Nazis of helpless people because of their race, religion or political belief. Many members of this body have eloquently expressed our feeling of repulsion and our anger. To the Hitlerites, their subordinates and functionaries and satellites, to the German people and to all other peoples under the Nazi yoke, we have made clear our determination to punish all participants in these
