

next day, in the morning. You know that, do you not?

"I only know that on the 11th of March when we held this meeting - - I assume you are right that it was the 11th - - we received a telegram report from a firm in Munich which is nearer the border, and I recall that Dr. Fischer gave certain information that troops were being mobilized in Bavaria. At any rate, this alarming news reached us during this meeting, to the greatest surprise of all of us."

"And you don't know who mentioned 'the short thrust into Czechoslovakia'?"

"No, I have no idea."

^{BUT}
~~you~~ ^{YOU} at least after the Austrian crisis in 1938, ^{DIDN'T} ~~did you~~ regard mobilization questions as deadly serious?"

"I always thought it was a matter of course that for a mobilization, there have to be certain mobilization plans for economy. After all, war affects economy, too."

"And at the time of the Austrian crisis, did you feel that the danger of war was sufficiently serious that it was unwise to enlarge the buildings in Frankfurt at that time?"

"For years I had held the view - -"

"Just a minute, Defendant, just a minute. I wasn't asking you about your prior feelings about moving to Berlin."

"Well, that was something that was always being brought up. One can imagine anything at such a moment as that meeting. One can say, 'Well, in the event of war, would France attack?' We did not know what was coming. We had no way of knowing when something like that starts, where it would end. I was thinking, 'If Italy comes in, and France comes in, there will be ~~planes~~ over Frankfurt.' That is dangerous, and it would suit me to say that it would be better in Berlin."
