

The news went to Dearborn via a personal letter from an obscure employee at Poissy, to a fellow employee at Dearborn, who passed the letter ~~on~~ on to Sorenson. In May ¹⁹⁴² Edsel Ford himself reacted to ~~these events which had happened since January~~. "It is interesting to note that you are laying plans for a more peaceful future." ^P Mentioning the bombing, he wrote: ~~these~~

~~THIS QUOTE CAREFULLY:~~ "Photographs of the plant on fire were published in American newspapers but fortunately no reference was made to the Ford Motor Company."

^A By August 15, ~~1941~~ 1942, according to Dolfuss' letter to Edsel Ford (via Lesto), production had been resumed at the same rate and "machinery and equipment restored to its pre-bombing status." ^P On September 29, 1942, Dollfus reported to Edsel Ford that the Vichy Government had paid French Ford 38 million francs for damages incurred in the bombing of Poissy. ^{TP} Here ended the correspondence. ^{undoubtedly} Saved by Carl Krauch, French Ford became, ^{along with Farben itself, one of the} the most productive, profitable enterprise in ~~the~~ France during the war, ~~save only Farben itself. What Farben's future intentions for Ford may have been were hinted by one statement in the "New Order."~~ ~~that it was planned "also for the countries which are still neutral."~~
