

that my own sons were at the front, as simple soldiers in the front lines, and I didn't hear anything from them for months. I had to count every day as a possible time when I might receive a report that either one or the other might have been killed in action. I believe that it would have been an undignified act and that my sons would have considered it as such if, in such a situation, I would have thought of my own small life first. Perhaps a second aspect entered into the consideration. I knew that my country was about to enter the most difficult period in its history, and it was not at all my intention to desert my country in this difficult position. After all, I was attached to this country more than if it had been under happier circumstances. I just meant that I did not want to leave this country.

Thank you very much, Dr. Krauch. Well, this was your psychological attitude.

→ TRIPLE-SPACED

The plan to get foreign workers was his, he went on, but the orders came from Hitler and the Ministry of Economics. "Professor Doctor Krauch," his counsel explained, to the TRIBUNAL, "was a superior expert without any independent right to make decisions or to take initiative." KRAUCH did not recall his letter urging the Engineer Duerrfeld at Auschwitz to carry on "with the same eagerness and energy which you (have) manifested." ←

At the same time, I order you hereby to continue to function as my commissary for the setting up of the whole Auschwitz plant and in this capacity to guarantee by all means the early start of the most important production of this work."

At about the same time, KRAUCH had written to Himmler: I was particularly pleased to hear that during this discussion, you limited that you may possibly aid the expansion of another synthetic factory which I consider absolutely essential for securing rubber supplies, in a similar way as was done at Auschwitz, by making available the inmates of your camps if necessary. I have also written to Minister Speer to this effect and would be grateful if you would continue sponsoring and aiding us in
