

questioned. Only by asserting himself had he found release ~~and~~ and then only during the time he was doing so. I recalled an instruction he had set to his Verbindungsmaenner in South America:

"Send everything, everything is of interest, no detail too small to be overlooked." And here, suddenly, his continual assertiveness was revealed as a pitiable passion he could not help.

P Surely this had not been revealed before, or his colleagues would ~~have~~ have mentioned it.

Was this a new understanding of himself or the recall of a different man he had once been?

Certainly ~~he~~ had written enough in the ~~of~~ jail to cover 10 average autobiographies, yet this very oddity accented the problem of all of them. They were not often asked: "Where were you on the night of January 25?" They were asked: "What were you doing between 1933 and 1940?" The others had ^{successfully} ~~successively~~ ^{pigeonholed} ~~pigeonholed~~ their activities during those years; he could not. ~~It was a weird~~

~~weird feeling, knowing suddenly that while the others were anchored to an amorphous world~~

~~without visible victims, precisely this world seemed to be breaking him down.~~ ^{this} Was ~~it~~ that

~~a reflection of the~~ ^{now} ~~this same~~ instability that had made of him the International Joiner of all time? ^{No, his} ~~Toward that, too,~~

~~attitude was~~ ^{altered} ~~altered~~ by something ~~that~~ more than a determination to be liked, ~~had~~ ^{altered} altered his attitude. In his office

~~he had kept a "Met File" -- hundreds of names, with their business and social positions noted;~~

~~Now he spoke of his "Met File" modestly, but the strain of being~~ ^{MODEST BREWED} ~~now he told of it modestly, but with the strain brewing perspiration on his forehead.~~ "Hungry stomachs are always troublesome. Satisfied people don't give any trouble. Therefore, I saw the strongest necessary ^{it} for the maintenance of peace in a sound export for Germany."