

the overseas business; he had South and Central America and the British Empire, Dr. Gattineau took care of the Scandinavian countries and I concerned myself with the United States and France because I had travelled much in the United States until 1932...Goebbels lost interest in us. He called us a clique of capitalists that only criticized."

One evening late in 1933, after Ilgner had been decrying "the crude ~~and~~ and shocking methods of the Propoganda Ministry which do great harm to German export interests," ^{"Goebbels"} ~~Goebbels~~ left in a huff, never to attend another meeting. ^{about the "crude and shocking METHODS"} The Circle continued worried until Ilgner cabled a New York publicity agent, Ivy Lee, asking him to come to Germany. Ilgner had met Lee in 1929 when a former Alien Property Custodian had made a strong attack against the newly incorporated American I.G. ~~Gle~~ Chemical Company.

"I went ~~to~~ to see Charlie Mitchell and he said to me, 'Don't worry about it, don't get excited,' ^B but he said 'you can talk to Walter Teagle, the president of Standard Oil, and other industrialists. He can tell you whether this has to be taken seriously.'

^{Then} "I went to see Teagle and he said, 'you are not well known, you Farben people. Nobody knows what you are doing; you have got to make some publicity first. Our publicity agent is Mr. Ivy Lee. I am going to have you introduced to him.'

"He had me introduced. I went to ~~see~~ ^{see} Lee. The Board of American I.G. retained him.

The silver pamphlet on Farben that was distributed here -- a simple idea, but it comes from Ivy Lee."
