

In 1945, ^{when I arrived} as a member of the American Delegation to the Potsdam Conference, I saw our Government ~~endorse~~ ~~and~~ ~~forced~~ give paper endorsement to a program for insuring that Germany would not again become the dominant power in Europe. In the words of our ~~top~~ ~~most~~ top leaders: "Last time we rebuilt Germany. This time any rebuilding we do will be done for ~~Germany to sustain~~ the victims." Before we took off for Potsdam, the White House announced:

This ~~endorsement~~ program, ~~however~~ was not simply the wasteful redistribution of ~~German~~ industrial power. The Ruhr was to be internationalized.

In 1945, on the eve of Potsdam, the White House announced a program for a balance of industrial strength in Europe. In the words of our top leaders: "Last time we re-built Germany; This time any rebuilding we do will be for the victims." The State Dept delegation ~~was~~ ^{plus to Berlin} proceeded to the little suburb outside Berlin ahead of President Truman's personal ambassador, Edwin Pauley. Pauley ~~was sent to Potsdam~~ ^{had been affected} by a long-standing disagreement between two factions of the Court. ^{where staff was to go the Am. delegation.}
