statement, you would have to start out in a different way.

Q. This is a continuing interrogation of Mr. Paul Dencker. Mr. Dencker, from time to time I will have an interrogation with you similar to the one which is about to follow. My objective is to have the record indicate the types of work assignments which are given to you and so that you can have access to a piece of writing which will tell you exactly what we have in mind. Now, you have been talking with Mr. Wolffsohn about certain further work concerning the participations of I. G. Farben. Is that correct?

A. Yes, sir. I did the work and then the appropriate participations.

Q. I won't go into that any further because he has been working with you on that directly. Do you understand what he does have in mind?

A. Yes. I have given him instructions where he could get more details for his work. Of course, which I could help. I was the assigned person.

Q. Among other things, I reviewed a previous statement you had made which is entitled "Oil Interests of the I. G. Farbenindustrie A.G. in Europe, Foreign Countries", which you did in August, 1945. It is about 11 pages long. I would like to suggest that some of that work be redone in order to make the leading events stand out more. In some cases it won't be necessary to have so much detail. Let me take an example of what I would have in mind. I think that with respect to the production and distribution of oil and gasoline, you should do a rather brief and very concise statement along the following lines. You could start out by stating that no natural oil was produced in Germany itself.

A. I beg your pardon. It was produced in the Hannover vicinity.

Q. My understanding was that it was almost insignificant compared to the quantity
