MEMORANDUM

26 April 1947

TO: General Taylor

RE: Status of Flick Property

As you know, one matter which we have not yet been able to examine very closely by reason of shortage of manpower, time, etc. is the present status of Flick's corporate and personal property. We shall eventually have to come to grips with this problem, which has already been raised with us by officials of OMGUS.

A few weeks ago Mr. Kagan and others of the Finance Division asked us for information on Flick's foreign assets. We explained that we had not yet been able to investigate the matter, and that we would appreciate receiving any information they might have as well as any recommendations they might have for ultimate disposition of the assets after the successful conclusion of the trial.

Mr. Marcu has just reported that on a trip yesterday to Maxhuette to obtain slave labor witnesses he ran into several property control officials of Military Government. They have Flick's property in the American Zone under control, and Maxhuette is being run by a trustee, named Enzmann, appointed by them. Flick's personal property (including, for example, $100,000 worth of jewelry which Mrs. Flick is presently wearing) is also subject to their control under Law No. 52. According to Mr. Marcu the OMGUS property control officials are under the impression that their hands are tied and that they cannot make any ultimate disposition of the Flick personal or corporate properties until the conclusion of our case. According to Mr. Marcu they
